Introduction

Interior design careers are ever-growing, with a variety of different paths for aspiring interior design professionals to consider.

Interior design is the art and science of enhancing the interior of a building to achieve a healthier and more aesthetically pleasing environment for the people using the space. An interior designer is someone who plans, researches, coordinates, and manages such enhancement projects. Interior design is a multifaceted profession that includes conceptual development, space planning, site inspections, programming, and research, communicating with the stakeholders of a project, construction management, and execution of the design.

Our 1 year interior designing program explores the potential of design to transform a space into unique experiences. This program equips our students to conceive meaningful ideas and convert them into a built environment that positively impacts and improves the experience of end users.

Exhibition Interior Design

If you're particularly fond of visiting museums and galleries, then your ideal interior design career path may be in exhibition design. As with any piece of art, there is a lot more than immediately meets the eye in exhibition design. For example, if you are designing for a museum that houses historical artifacts, you must consider how the building's temperature affects the preservation of these fragile objects.

Furniture Design

Thus, furniture works as a functional and circulatory element in interior design. Interior designers use furniture to establish a pleasing sense of order.
